The Business Of Farming

—like the business of Manufacturing—should be done in a practical business way. Proceeds should be put in a bank. Payments should be made by Cheque. A certain percentage of the profits should be put in a Savings Account as an emergency fund. The man who has a cash surplus in a bank, is protected against bad seasons and hard times.

THE WINNIE WING CASE

The action which arose over the collision of R. B. Shipman's schooner, Winnie Wing, and a dredge scow was advanced another stage at Toronto
last week, and now the legal fraternity is greatly agitated because it seems unable to decide what court should hear the action. Each owner brought action against the other. Mr.
Shipman sued to recover $3,200 damages and Mr. Phil estimated his loss at $2,000. The defendant contended that the case was a case for the admiralty court, but the plaintiff thought otherwise. Justice Middleton decided in favor of the plaintiff on the question of jurisdiction and Charcellor Boyd heard the case, dismissing claim. The plaintiff appealed from both, the claim and the counter-claim decision and claimed under section of the Canadian shipping laws,
that in cases where both parties were
to blame that the damages should be divided equally. The defendant then made a counter-appeal blaming the plaintiff for the whole accident. After the argument in the appeals had been started in Toronto on Friday the defendant also appealed from Justice Middleton's decision as to jurisdiction, and then the appeal court decided that constitutional questions
were involved and laid the matter
over until the first court in September, when the minister of justice and the attorney-general will be asked to attend. Francis King, Kingston, represented the plaintiff and H. A. Pur-bridge the defendant.

MUSTARD SPRAYING.

Last year, Mr. G. B. Curran, of the Agricultural Office, Napanee, sprayed
a 10 acre field of barley on the farm of D. N. Lucas, Odessa, which was badly infested with mustard. Part of the field was sprayed and part left un-sprayed. Each part was carefully harvested and threshed separately.
On the sprayed part of the field the yield of barley was 30 bushels per acre.
On the unsprayed part only 30 bushels per acre. The increased yield from spraying was 9 bushels, valued at 60c
a bushel, the extra barley was worth $5.40 per acre. The cost of spraying was about $2 per acre.

The grain should be sprayed when it is four to six inches high, and before the mustard leaves get rough. The earlier the grain is sprayed the less spraying material will be required per acre, and the better results.

DOXSEE & CO. MILLINERY

We are opening to-day a choice lot of New Millinery suitable for spring and summer.

The artistic note is strongly pronounced in most of the hats and there are very few, if any, shapes which are too extreme to be generally becoming and to appeal to the taste of the most discriminating wearer.

The use of Taffeta and Moire
in both piece goods and ribbon has certainly been revived to greater honors than ever before, they are shown in all colors.

The underbrim trimming is a new feature of Flowers, Osprey, Smart Feather Mounts, Stick-Ups and Wing Trimmings, all being considered very good.

We would also draw your attention

TO PREPARE THE SOLUTION.

Dissolve 80 lbs. of Iron Sulphate in 40 gallons (1 barrel) of water. Iron Sulphate readily dissolves in cold water. The solution should be strained through a cheese cloth as it is put into the spray pump tank. This will remove dirt and small particles that are apt to clog the nozzles.

TIME TO APPLY—Apply on a calm, clear day, just as soon as the first few plants in the field show flowers. IT IS VERY IMPORTANT TO SPRAY EARLY. If the plants are left too long the treatment is not nearly so effective. If a heavy rain comes within 24 hours after the solution is applied, it will be necessary to spray again.

HOW TO SPRAY THE SOLUTION—An ordinary hand pump barrel sprayer, such as is employed to spray fruit trees may be used, or a potato sprayer can be rigged up to do the work. Many of the up-to-date potato sprayers have a special broadcast attachment for spraying weeds. These are excellent for large areas, as they cover a wide strip at each round. Care must be taken to see that every mustard plant is covered with the solution in the form of fine spray. It is important to apply with good pressure. Iron Sulphate may be obtained at any hardware store or drug store.

Farmers who wish to spray grain for mustard are invited to apply to the agricultural office, Napanee, as Mr. Curran wishes to obtain some fields that lie along prominent roads for demonstration fields.

FOUND DEAD IN LAUNCH.

Perth, May 11.—Alex. Marks, a member of the well-known Marks family of theatrical companies, was found dead this afternoon in his launch on Christy Lake. Mr. Marks had left his cottage this morning to go to the foot of the lake, and when he did not return a search was made by his brother-in-law, Morley D. White, with the above result. Mr. Marks was known in almost every town and city in Ontario, and many New York State towns, being advance agent for many years for the Marks Brothers' Company.

The latest thing in candy manufacture "Nylo Chocolates" strictly fresh at Hooper's—Napanee's Largest Drug Store.

Deseronto, May 11.—A short time ago the license commissioners of Hastings county met here and renewed the four hotel licenses and granted an additional shop license to W. Woodcock, a prominent grocer of this place. At the meeting of the commissioners, largely signed petitions for and against the increase of licenses were presented. An appeal was made to the license department at Toronto through the Ontario branch of the Dominion Alliance. After careful consideration of the matter the department refused to grant the new license.

MAYOR'S HOUSE GUARDED.

Labor Troubles in Montreal Have Reached Acute Stage.

MONTREAL, May 12.—Detectives were yesterday morning guarding Mayor Martin's house as a result of the labor situation, which has reached an acute stage. Rumors have been heard of threats of violence on the part of the foreign element, who declare that civic officials have held out promises of labor to them which have not been realized.

The mayor is particularly blamed, for it just two weeks ago since he informed a gathering on the Champ de Mars that in a few days there would be work for all. Yesterday morning a growing crowd of out-of-workers again took possession of the parade ground, including between three and four thousand men.

From all sides were heard murmurs of discontent, and there were rumors afloat that the unemployed intended to gather in even greater numbers yesterday afternoon if nothing was done to appease them and take the City Hall by storm.

Reported Seizure of Lobos Lighthouse by U. S. Boats and Arrest of Five Americans at Vera Cruz Complicate Mexican Situation. Delegates Well Chosen.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—peace negotiations mark pending formal sittings of American mediators to be held today on Canadian soil, the State Department here yesterday with several serious phase Mexican situation demanding its attention. Secretary Bryan, who had been in the Argentine legation the afternoon and spent the day in conference with the South American envoys, discussing the detention of John R. Silliman, can vice-consul at Saltillo, by the Federalists; the reported seizure of Lobos Island with its light American torpedo boats and of the five South Americans rest at Vera Cruz for United States sailors and Mr. Bryan insisted that the detention of Silliman must be brought to an end. When asked about the matter later, he would not say what would happen if the vice-consul were kept in prison, but he was emphatic in announcing the government's determination to feed.

In announcing the Lobos incident the Secretary informed mediators that so far the United States Government had received official confirmation of the detention of the Americans on the island and that in the confirmation he could offer no explanation of the reported detention of the navy. In administrative it is contended that if the seizure had been made, it was not a aggression against Huerta, but a necessary step to protect the United States against possible disaster as a result of the closing of the island by the Federalists.

While the representatives of the United States were preparing for their departure from Vera Cruz, the U. S. Government officially announced its representation in mediation negotiations between the South American triumvirate and the Federalists at Aguascalientes, Ont., next Monday.

Justice Lamar, of the United States Supreme Court, and Fred W. Henshaw, former Solicitor General, were yesterday by President Wilson as the United States representatives. From Huerta's side, the United States representatives were Emilio Rabasa and Luis G. Carranza. Ambassador De Gama, Minister Naon, of Argentina, Minister Suarez, of Chile, the United States last night expressed satisfaction in the selection of the advisers of both Governments, and little is expected in the preliminary negotiations until all have been named.

Gen. Carranza and the Mexican Federalists who seek Huerta's overthrow will not be represented in the negotiations, according to the United States officials.

From Tampico, where the Federalists and Constitutionalists have been preparing for a struggle, came rumblings of a battle while reports that Huerta's

ATTACK STILL GOING ON?

London Paper Asserts That Tampico Has Been Taken.

LONDON, May 12.—The Daily Chronicle in its issue of to-day asserts that certain London business houses have received reports that the rebels have captured Tampico.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The Constitutional attack on Tampico, which began Sunday night, was in progress yesterday, according to information received by the confidential agency of the Constitutionalists in Washington. The Constitutionalists, under command of Generals Pablo Gonzales and Luis Caballero, are attacking from the north and west sides of the city.

Admiral Mayo notified the Department last night that twenty-three cannon shots were heard during Sunday night's attack on the city. Other despatches from the admiral are being eagerly awaited by the Department. Clarence A. Miller and Neill E. Pressley, the American Consul and Vice-Consul at Tampico, who were ordered by the Government to leave their posts as soon as the attack was impending, are now aboard the battleship Connecticut, and scarcely more than a dozen Americans remained behind after the consul gave them notice that the United States Government wished them to leave the city.

"DON'T HOLD CANADA!"

Joseph Martin Warns Against Interference With Dominion.

LONDON, May 12.—Joseph Martin, M.P. for East Lancashire, declares that he considers a despatch published by The Times on Saturday from its Toronto correspondent, in which stress was laid upon the alleged "Americanization of Canada" as very dangerous.

The correspondent mentioned that the need for "molding the Canadian people into a common devotion to the Empire." As to this Mr. Martin says: "The fewer molding attempts by the people of the United Kingdom the better. One strong reason for making the British sway popular is that the Canadian people are allowed to pursue their own fancies and manage their own affairs."

W. L. Griffith, the secretary of the High Commissioner's office, declined to discuss the matter, but referred the interviewer to a passage in his recent book, in which he declared there is no serious movement in the United States for the annexation of Canada.

NO CRIMINAL ACTION.

But Other Steps Will Be Taken In Gun-Running Cases.

LONDON, May 12.—In the Commons yesterday Premier Asquith announced that it had been decided not to take criminal proceedings over the recent Ulster gun-running, but certain other steps would be taken.

The Premier also said that whatever conversations were proceeding between the heads of the political parties were confidential at present. Fulllest opportunity would subsequently be afforded the House for discussion.

CASE NOT YET ENDED?

Father Gnam May Proceed With Suit Against Bishop Fallon.

PORT HURON, Mich., May 12.—The sensational fight which Rev. Father Gnam of Wyoming, Ont., has been waging in the Canadian courts, and which received another setback at Toronto on Thursday, when an appeal from the decision of Justice Britton was dismissed, is to give way now, it is understood, to a revival of his suit for $50,000 for alleged slan- der against Bishop Fallon.

The suit was commenced over a year ago as the result of an order from Bishop Fallon deposing Father Gnam, but was dropped, according to the latter's testimony under an agree- ment by which Archbishop McNeill of Toronto promised to restore him and provide him with maintenance until this would have been done. Father Gnam later brought action against the archbishop, alleging breach of this agreement, and it is because this suit has been decided against him that he proposes to renew the original action against Bishop Fallon.

Tremblay Case Goes On.

LONDON, May 12.—Argument in the Quebec case of Despatie versus Tremblay, concerning the annulment of the marriage between cousins of the fourth degree, who married with- out an episcopal dispensation, con- tinued yesterday before the Privy Council.

The Lord Chancellor asked Mr. St. Germain, who upheld the nullity, many questions concerning old French law in Quebec. Mr. St. Germain admitted it would have been absurd and repugnant to compel Protestant churches, which were recog- nized to have jurisdiction, in deter- mining the validity of their own mar- riages, to accept the old law.

Nearly 200 Dead.

CATANIA, Sicily, May 12.—The official estimate of the dead as a result of the recent earthquake, which destroyed many villages on the eastern slope of Mount Etna, places the number at close to 200. This is said to be the largest percentage ever re- corded, considering the smallness of the area affected by the disturbance.

made leaders of the political, dip- lomatic and social world of London, the men in the uniforms of their rank, and the women in beautiful gowns and jewels of untold wealth.

The scene, which was of gorgeous brilliance, was for a time marred by a suffragette demonstration. During an interlude a suffragette rose in the balcony stalls and shouted: "King, George, women are being tor- tured in your dominions."

Two men sitting nearby seized the disturber and dragged her outside, while other men ejected women with her, who started "demonstrating." They shrieked, kicked and clawed as they were being carried from the building. Meanwhile other suffra- gettes in the gallery above the royal box threw down a great quantity of suffragette leaflets.

King George and Queen Mary with their royal guests, and thirty other members of royalty occupied a box in the centre of the house, with mem- bers of the diplomatic corps and their wives on one side and the cabinet ministers and their leaders on the other. The greater part of the other boxes, and many of the stalls, were likewise occupied by the guests of the monarchs, so that the general public had to be content with the upper galleries.

White and scarlet, the Danish col- ors, predominated in the decorations. The proscenium was decorated with crimson and gold roses. In the ex- treme corners there were large gold- en cornucopias with masses of crim- son roses falling from them. Depend- ing from these were two large fes- toons reaching from the corners of the crown, composed of yellow flowers. The auditorium was de- corated with crimson and pink roses.

SOCIALISM ADVANCES

French Election Gives Party Big Gain In Chamber.

PARIS, May 12.—The Socialists were very successful yesterday on the second ballot for members of the Chamber of Deputies, 61 of them be- ing elected. This gives them 101 seats in the new Chamber as com- pared with 69 in the old. The Cail- laux Radicals managed to hold their own, electing 74 members, which with 87 elected on the first ballot, gives the party 161, as compared with 156 in the old chamber.

The Temps, analyzing the position of the Deputies, according to their pre-election declarations, places 308 out of the 602 members as in favor of the three years military service, the others being designated as against such service or doubtful; 279 members for the income tax and 352 for proportional representation.

The Socialists' success in the elec- tions appears to have been due to their well-defined program and their adequate organization. The Radicals and other groups had almost as many platforms as candidates.

The Briandists lost ground by lack of preparation and general slackness in campaigning.

THE $45,000,000 DEAL.

SOME FACTS ABOUT MACKENZIE AND MANN AND THE DEAL WITH THE BORDEN GOVERNMENT—GOLD-BRICKING CANADA.

In cash subsidies, land grants and bond guarantees the people of Canada have given to Mackenzie and Mann some $250,000,000 or, in other words, more than $30 for every man, woman and child in the Dominion. To-day, under legislation already introduced in Parliament, the Borden Government proposes to grant further aid to the same two railway magnates to the amount of $45,000,000 in a bond guarantee.

In return for this guarantee the Dominion is to receive common stock in the Canadian Northern to the face value of $40,000,000 but stock which has had no market value up to the present and upon which not a cent has been paid in dividends. In other words, the individual share of the people of Canada of this stock, which has had no market value and has never paid dividends, is $5 as against the $30 per capita set out above.

Mackenzie and Mann are the controlling owners of the Canadian Northern. They have issued to themselves stock in the Canadian Northern and its subsidiary companies to the amount of $138,000,000, and never paid a dollar for it. Before dividends can possibly be paid upon the common stock of the Canadian Northern, and any return given the people of Canada for the assistance they have given to Mackenzie and Mann, interest must be paid upon bonds and debenture stock to the amount of $251,000,000. What prospect can there be that for decades to come Canada will receive a single dollar in dividends upon the common stock to be given the Government, if, indeed, a dollar is ever received? Further light is shed by the fact that the estimated net earnings of the railway for the current year will fall more than $6,000,000 below the fixed charges.

Mackenzie and Mann are the con-stand out in connection with the Canadian Northern and the Borden proposal to grant them further aid amounting to $45,000,000. From these facts the people will draw their own conclusions. Nothing can wipe out the fact that already Canada has given these men $250,000,000, in one form or another, for the construction of a railway which is not yet completed; that Mackenzie and Mann handed over rich contracts to themselves and paid the bills with money obtained from the people of Canada; that they voted themselves $138,000,000 of stock for which they have not paid a dollar; that they are giving Canada a block of stock which has no value to-day and which will not pay dividends for many years, if ever; that the Borden Government sought to conceal the facts from the people and denied that assistance was to be given the Canadian Northern when negotiations between Mackenzie and Mann and the Government were actually in progress.

If there were no other question of importance this one, at least, would demand answer: If the arrangement whereby Mackenzie and Mann are to get a bond guarantee of $45,000,000 is a good arrangement, if further assistance from the public treasury is wise—why did Mr. Borden and his colleagues strive so hard to keep the facts from the public until the "deal" was completed?

A LOW TARIFF'S EFFECTS.

COST OF LIVING DECREASES IN UNITED STATES—IN CANADA, UNDER BORDEN, IT ADVANCES MONTHLY.

For the first month or so after the downward revision of the United States tariff no general and considerable change in prices was noticeable across the border. In more recent months, however, when the operation of the tariff has had time to make itself felt, there has come a decrease in the cost of living to the American citizen.

In December, 1913, about two months after the tariff went into effect, the index number given by Bradstreet's for the average cost of commodities in general use in the United States was 9,299. At the close of February, 1914, Bradstreet's reported that the index number had dropped to 8,869 so the saving in living cost to the American people generally during those three months was material. The removal of taxation was having its inevitable beneficial result.

In Canada, however, where the Borden Government continues to enforce its High Protectionist ideas

"PROSPERITY" UNDER BORDEN. GREAT SLACKING OF CANADIAN TRADE ADVANCE IN 1913-14—WHERE THE AMERICAN MARKET HELPED.

The kind of prosperity Canada is experiencing under Borden rule is indicated by the trade figures for the fiscal year 1913-14 made public by the Department of trade and Commerce on May 3rd. During the twelve-month Canada's trade increased, it is true, but the increase far and away below that shown in other recent years. In the preceding year, for instance, the increase in total trade was over $200,000,000 but in 1913-14, a further period of Borden administration, the advance in trade was only $26,697,554 while it is noteworthy that during the year financial depression and unemployment were general throughout the Dominion. It may also be noted that it was only during the first six months of the time that there was any net increase whatever in our trade. During the latter half of the year there was a steady decrease in the business done. In March, for example, the drop in Canada's total trade, as compared with the trade for March of the previous year, was no less than $23,000,000, decreases being shown both in exports and imports.

Had it not been for the removal of many American duties under the Wilson-Underwood tariff and the opening of the United States market last October the Dominion would have made even a more sorry trade showing than has to be recorded. Following the removal of the American duties on live stock there was a great increase in the flow of Canadian stock south-ward and while the total export of animal products in 1912-13 amounted to only $2,500,000, in round figures, the export in 1913-14 was $9,000,000 and of this total over $8,000,000 was accounted for by the exports to the United States. Similarly, reductions in the American tariff on breadstuffs accounted for the greater part of the increase in Canadian export of these products. Had it not been, then, for the privilege of opportunities of wider markets given Canadians through the lowering of the tariff of a foreign country the decrease in the business done by the Dominion last year would have been even more startling than the official figures show.

ONLY $6,000,000 OUT!

The looseness and inaccuracy of the information in regard to Canadian Northern affairs which is being given by the Borden Government may be gauged from the fact that in one case alone the Ministry omitted a $6,000,000 item. Between such close friends as the Government and Mackenzie and Mann $6,000,000 may be a mere bagatelle but the average citizen of Canada is likely to have a somewhat different idea.

The omission of the $6,000,000 item, $5,965,731, to be exact, was made in the Government return showing the estimated amount required to complete the construction of the Canadian Northern. The sum left out is the amount required to complete the Montreal tunnels and terminals. As soon as Liberal newspapers gave publicity to the fact that the item had been omitted the Government apologists hastened to explain that the "mistake" was due to an "error in transmission." It is quite possible that this was the case, but the incident is illuminating as indicating the inaccuracy and unreliability of the "information" in regard to the affairs of Mackenzie and Mann which Mr. Borden and his colleagues are giving the people who, under Borden legislation, are to endorse notes for the two railway magnates to the huge amount of $15,000,000.

GERMAN LINE ADVANCE

African Railway Has Now Reached Livingstone's Old Home.

The announcement that the main East Africa Central Railway reached Kigoma, the best harbor on Lake Tanganyika, somewhat as a surprise in Germany. It is quite evident that the location of the line, from Tabora Kigoma, has been built at pressure, as its completion was expected until the beginning of 1914.

It is unnecessary to state that completion of the railway was the most important step in the development of the East African colony that it will have a considerable influence on the trade routes of India and the Belgian Congo, significant that added to the announcement of the completion of the railway is a statement to the effect that in a few months German steamers will ply across Lake Tanganyika to the Belgian Congo.

Kigoma is only a few miles from Tabora, where Stanley met Livingstone. The startling contrast between the past and now is best shown by the fact that this historical spot has been brought within three weeks' traveling from London or Han-decades to come Canada will receive a single dollar in dividends upon the common stock to be given the Government, it, indeed, a dollar is ever received? Further light is shed by the fact that the estimated net earnings of the railway for the current year will fall more than $6,000,000 below the fixed charges.

Mackenzie and Mann are the controlling owners of the Canadian Northern Railway. The lines built by the Canadian Northern and its subsidiary railway companies have been constructed by Mackenzie, Mann and Company, contractors. The same Mackenzie and Mann who control the Canadian Northern are the Mackenzie and Mann of the company who built the roads constructed by the railway company. And Mackenzie and Mann, railway owners, awarded contracts to Mackenzie and Mann, contractors without tenders. It was a very nice arrangement for Mackenzie and Mann.

For building the Halifax and South-western—a Mackenzie and Mann railway—Mackenzie and Mann, contractors, received $5,663,972; for building the Canadian Northern Quebec, $4,228,889; for work done on the Canadian Northern Ontario lines, $52,815,323; for Canadian Northern lines from Port Arthur to the Yellow Head Pass, $109,095,627; for Canadian Northern Pacific lines, $34,760,909, with more to come; for smaller contracts, $5,290,681. Not content with giving Mackenzie and Mann these fine contracts—paid for out of assistance given by the people of Canada—and given them without tender, Mackenzie and Mann, railway owners, gave Mackenzie and Mann, contractors, the work of purchasing equipment for the railway. As a result of this move another score or so of millions was set down to the credit of Mackenzie and Mann.

How much profit went into the pockets of Mackenzie and Mann through these arrangements is not known, may never be known; but it is reasonable to assume that upon contracts which they awarded to themselves without tender, and upon work which they themselves supervised and paid for out of cash and guarantees given them by the people of Canada, Mackenzie and Mann made an abundance of profits. They handled the money as controlling owners of the railway and they handled the money as contractors. Does anyone suppose that with such a "soft thing" as this in their control Mackenzie and Mann did not look out for themselves? These are some of the facts which of February, 1914, Bradstreet's reported that the index number had dropped to 8.8691 so the saving in living cost to the American people generally during those three months was material. The removal of taxation was having its inevitable beneficial result.

In Canada, however, where the Borden Government continues to enforce its High Protectionist ideas the cost of living has been increasing, not falling. In March, 1913, for example, the index number of prices in Canada, as given by the Department of Labor, was 136; by February, 1914, it had risen slightly and in March, 1914, it stood at 136.7. The increase was not great but it may be borne in mind that an increase in the cost of living has been the regular thing since Mr. Borden and his friends took office and that a rise in prices goes on steadily while in the United States and in Great Britain decreases are the order. Moreover, while in the United States the Government has legislated to lessen the cost of living by reducing the tariff burdens upon the people the Borden Government in Canada increases those burdens by tariff revision upwards and thus renders certain a continued advance in the ordinary living expenses of the average Canadian citizen.

POINTS FROM THE BUDGET DEBATE.

When the farmers asked for the abolition of the duty on wheat on the ground that they themselves and the country as a whole would greatly benefit from this tariff change the Government said, in effect, that the agriculturists did not know their own business, and free wheat was refused. When the iron and steel manufacturers and the manufacturers of cut stone asked for increased tariff protection upon their products the Government hastened to do their will, heavier duties were imposed to the disadvantage of the Canadian consumer.

As a result of the Wilson-Underwood tariff it is now within the power of the Canadian Parliament by a single act to secure to Canadian farmers free access to the American market for wheat and wheat products and, at the same time, to secure for the Canadian consumer an immediate benefit in lower prices of flour which is made dear to-day because of the milling combine fostered in Canada by the present high tariff. When Liberal motions in favor of taking this step were offered in Parliament last month they were voted down by the Government and its majority.

During the Budget debate in the Commons it was shown that to-day Canadian makers of farm implements are competing successfully in the home markets of other nations and selling, too, more cheaply abroad than to the Canadian farmer. The present tariff protection given the manufacturers of these implements in Canada is consequently unnecessary and serves only to enhance the price of his machinery to the Canadian farmer. To lessen the burdens upon the farmers Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his supporters in the House moved to abolish the implement duties; against this motion the Conservatives recorded a unanimous vote. The lesson to the farmers should be clear.

By lessening the price of implements the abolition of the present duty on farm machinery would also lessen the cost of production on the farm and consequently, the price of food to the consumer. It was this step which the Liberals proposed in Parliament. Against this step the Conservatives in Parliament showed a solid front. The people pay.

mission. It is quite possible that this was the case, but the incident is illuminating as indicating the inaccuracy and unreliability of the "information" in regard to the affairs of Mackenzie and Mann which Mr. Borden and his colleagues are giving the people who, under Borden legislation, are to endorse notes for the two railway magnates to the huge amount of $45,000,000.

THE INFORMAL TEA.

How to Dispense Gracefully the Cup That Cheers.

The gentle art of impromptu hospitality is gradually dying out. No hostess of the present day seems to be prepared for unexpected guests. Even impromptu teas have been discarded for formal afternoon receptions, and only in a few old fashioned houses is the quaint old custom of serving 5 o'clock tea every day preserved. It is a most attractive custom, and it is a decided disparagement of the modern housekeepers that it should be allowed to die out. In England it is religiously observed, and visitors may always be sure of tea and crumpets if they call at 5 o'clock.

In most families of moderate means the woman of the house is seldom prepared to serve tea at a moment's notice. She seems to consider that she is very lucky if she and her home are sufficiently tidy to receive the guests at all.

Serving tea can always be quite simple and easy if the tea things are kept in good condition, ready to use. If the tea napkins and tray scarf are always placed near at hand and are laundered after each use, there will be no difficulty in fixing the tray in two minutes. Of course, if the hostess must stop and look for clean tea linen and polished tea silver, besides setting the tray and preparing the food, naturally 5 o'clock tea will assume bigger proportions than the average meal.

It is always a good idea to keep two or three tea tray sets of linen in use at the same time, so that a clean one may replace the soiled one instantly, but where only one can be afforded it may easily be washed out in a few moments. In such a case as this it is best to remove the tea linen immediately when the guests are gone and wash and iron it at once. In this way the set is clean for the next tea, whether it be tomorrow or next week.

Perhaps the housewives will urge as an excuse that it is impossible to prepare the food for tea at the last moment. But this is really very simple if the proper food is kept on hand. There are all kinds of delicious sweetened biscuits, crackers and cakes which come in moisture proof packages, and these may be kept indefinitely.

If sandwiches are desired there are pressed meats in tins, sardines, cheese, almost everything to be bought all cooked.

A most delicious sandwich and one which takes only a minute to prepare is made with crackers, pimento and cream cheese. The pimento and cheese may be bought already mixed in little glass jars. The crackers should be the plain, unsweetened, unsalted variety. This mixture may be spread on the crackers (with or without butter, to suit personal tastes) in a couple of minutes, and they are quite delicious.

the railway is a statement effect that in a few months steamers will ply across La ganyika to the Belgian Congo.

Kigoma is only a few miles Uji, where Stanley met Livingstone. The startling contrast between now is best shown by that this historical spot has brought within three weeks traveling from London or Harare from Dar-es-Salaam on the Ocean, the port of German East Africa to Kigoma is a distance of 1,000 miles. From the western side Lake, via the Congo to the Atlantic, the distance is nearly 2,000 miles. It will thus be seen that the route gives export facilities for some time to come as given by the Atlantic route, the Germans will be afforded access to the rich copper deposits of Katanga.

The new railway is of a narrow gauge and only a single track. For years the building of the railway was opposed in the Reichstag as expensive and wholly useless. It is to the merit of the German colonial policy in German East Africa, the late energetic German colonial secretary for the Colonies, that the project finally found favor.

It was not until 1905 that the first sod was cut, Prince A. of the Emperor's sons, presiding at the ceremony. The first section of 130 miles to Morogoro was opened for traffic in 1907, the section to Tabora, 530 miles from the first station, in 1912. The second section to Kigoma and the final section to Kigoma senting numerous engineering difficulties, but these have all been surmounted. The German Government owns about nine-tenths of the shares of the new line, is, therefore, to all intents and purposes a state railway. A series of express trains will run between Tanganyika and the Indian Ocean covering the distance in a few hours.

It is hardly likely that the new line, important as it is, will affect the Uganda line by affecting the trade of the British or by injuring the traffic of the German protectorate. The future developments of the line to Ruanda may perhaps result in this direction, Uganda is rapidly developing. Uganda railway will be completed for any loss.

George Underhill on coming of age had everything to live for. He stepped into a fortune of half a million, or $25,000 a year; was in excellent health, a favorite with his friends, especially attractive to girls, and the management of his estate was likely to give him enough to do to put an edge on his leisure moments. This was the outlook before the young man the day he was twenty-one years old.

would be in a dying condition during their married life. Others balked at this or at that till at last George had well nigh gone the rounds of the girls he would care to marry. One he had not tried. She was Lucy Ellis, an amiable, happy-go-lucky girl, from whose shoulders trouble rolled off easily and whose financial necessities were such that she was quite familiar with the pawnshop.

To Miss Ellis George concluded to make a proposal, but, being somewhat discouraged in his quest for a companion in his trouble, offered her much better terms than any he had yet proposed. After modestly telling her that he thought his income would suffice as well as a larger amount for the purpose of making him forget what was coming he promised to settle his whole estate upon her if she would marry him.

To his surprise, she threw her arms about his neck and said, with tears in her eyes: "We'll spend it all. And what will a lot of money be compared with the remembrance that we shall have at least a short time together?"

"But," he protested, "what will you live on when I am gone?"

"Why, I won't be any worse off for money than I am now, will I?"

She looked up at him from a pair of ingenuous, childlike eyes through her tears, and then and there his heart was won.

"Very well," he said. "Be it as you say."

Nevertheless it was not as she said, for George on the day of the wedding, unknown to her, placed $100,000 in trust for her. He did not give it to her direct, for he had no confidence in her holding on to it. Since she took no part whatsoever in the management of his affairs, he was enabled to do this without her discovering that it had been done.

George found in Lucy Ellis just what he needed. Perhaps she was too sympathetic, but sympathy in dealing with a sufferer is a good fault, and George would have rather had her sympathetic than cold. But his swelling grew larger and pained him, and he needed devotion as an invalid rather than a spender of money. For awhile after their marriage they spent money like water. In this George found his wife all that was to be desired. But his sufferings gradually increased, and he was obliged to give up pleasure seeking.

We can never tell for what persons are fitted until they are tried. Lucy, of whom her husband had expected nothing as a nurse, rose to the occasion. Her sunny disposition proved a great comfort to him. When he was much cast down, instead of speaking words of encouragement which she did not feel she wept with him. This did him more good than telling him what he knew was false, and he would say to himself: "Poor little girl! She suffers for me more than I suffer. I must brace up for her sake."

George's condition grew gradually worse. He would not have doctors to visit him, because he had been told that they could do him no good. Dr. Franklin came to see him occasionally and was now and then called in to effect some temporary relief. George asked him one day to tell him the nature of his disease, but the doctor convinced him that it was better for him to remain in ignorance of it.

One day Mrs. Underhill received a nice a happy couple. Their visits to the doctor were continued, and with the continuance of the treatment the swelling returned to its original size. When it had almost entirely disappeared Lucy said to her husband one day:

"George, don't you think it time we were beginning to get rid of some of this property that I married you to help spend? We haven't used half the income."

"That's just what I was thinking about. I fancy I can keep up the treatment as well in one city as another. Suppose we go abroad?"

"It's just the time of year to go, especially to Italy."

"We'll do it. By the bye, sweetheart, this discovery of radium as a cure for my trouble just came in time to prevent you having to spend our fortune alone."

"It wouldn't have been half the fun, would it?"

"I don't suppose it would."

She gave him a kiss, after which he wrote a note to a steamship company asking for room on the vessel to sail that day two weeks and to his banker for a letter of credit.

health, a favorite with his friends, especially attractive to girls, and the management of his estate was likely to give him enough to do to put an edge on his leisure moments. This was the outlook before the young man
the day he was twenty-one years old.

But on that same day he noticed a swelling in his neck about the size of a hazelnut. He had never had an ex-cessiveness of any kind on his body and could not understand the sudden appearance of this one. He stood before a mirror looking at it wonderingly.
He pinched it, and it hurt a little,
though not much. He thought he would show it to a doctor and get his opinion upon it, but since he expected to be busy with his guardian and the lawyers nearly all day, passing the papers in receiving his estate, he deferred the matter till the morrow.

During his birthday he was so taken up with affairs pertaining to his property that he forgot all about the swelling in his neck till preparing for bed,
when he noticed it again. He was a bit troubled about it and resolved that the first thing he would do in the morning would be to show it to his physician, Dr. Franklin. So as soon as the office hour of the physician came round George was admitted to his consulting room.

George did not leave Dr. Franklin's office for nearly an hour, and when he did he was in a very different mental condition from when he entered it.
The lump indicated an incurable disease. The doctor tried in every way to avoid telling him this, for the double reason that his patient would suffer in mind as well as in body and his knowing that he had not long to live would hasten the end. George, however, gathered from him that he had anywhere from a few months to a few years on earth. As to how much he would suffer the doctor did not tell him. Possibly he did not know himself. He convinced his patient that he had better remain ignorant of what the disease was.

George was a philosophic fellow, and when he had recovered, so far as recovery was possible from the shock,
he began to lay plans for spending the brief unexpired term of his life in a way to alleviate the condition to the best advantage. Miss Alice Woodbridge was his favorite among his girl acquaintances, and he thought he would like to have her companionship
for the brief season of life left to him.
He called upon her, stated the case
and asked her to be his wife, agreeing to settle half his fortune upon her, the other half to be spent in such comforts or pleasures or journeys as would help him to forget his coming demise.

Miss Woodbridge asked for a few days to consider the proposition, but,
being a girl with an eye to improving her condition, when she gave her answer insisted that the whole amount of his estate be settled on her except the income during his life, which she considered ample for his purpose.
Whether or no she was right he did not stop to consider, but broke off the negotiations.

George tried several other girls. One who had no especial affection for him refused him on the ground that she did not care to tie herself up for a money consideration to a man who visit him, because he had been told that they could do him no good. Dr.

Franklin came to see him occasionally and was now and then called in to effect some temporary relief. George asked him one day to tell him the nature of his disease, but the doctor convinced him that it was better for him
to remain in ignorance of it.

One day Mrs. Underhill received a note from Dr. Franklin asking her to bring her husband to his office. Many cures were being announced for different diseases by investigators, but most of them excited wild hopes only to be crushed. A cure for her husband's disease had been discovered which—at any rate, in certain cases—gave temporary relief. She might tell this to the invalid, giving him to understand that the relief was expected to be only temporary. Any relief was acceptable, and, ordering a car, George was carried to the physician's office.

Dr. Franklin covered his neck with sheet lead with a hole in it large enough to admit the swelling. What else he did George could not see, and,
as for Lucy, she did not understand what it meant. The doctor was bringing to bear upon the swelling some invisible current, but what it was she could not know without an altogether uncommon scientific knowledge.

Several visits were made to Dr.
Franklin's office, and the swelling on the patient's neck began to recede, and after awhile it became diminutive.
Then one day Lucy took up a morning newspaper and read to her husband an item of news. It was an announcement that the radium rays had been brought to bear on cancer and that the disease had been in certain cases undoubtedly interrupted. Whether or not radium would permanently cure it the operators had not considered themselves
prepared to announce.

"Lucy," said George, looking at his wife with hope lighting his eye, "I shouldn't wonder if that's what my trouble is, and Dr. Franklin is applying radium in my case."

"I'm sure it is!" cried the wife with that impulsive embrace which was her treatment for both good and bad conditions.

George was to visit the doctor that morning. When he and his wife reached the office Lucy said to the physician:

"Doctor, my husband has cancer, and a cure has been found."

"Who told you that?"

"The newspapers."

"Well," replied the doctor thoughtfully, "we are not yet ready to announce that we have found a cure, but we feel very hopeful."

"You mean you are certain, but you won't say so for fear of raising false expectations."

"We're pretty well satisfied that radium is death to the cancer scourge."

The Underhills left the doctor's office.

Regularity

of the bowels is an absolute necessity for good health. Unless the waste matter from the food which collects there is got rid of at least once a day, it decays and poisons the whole body, causing biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches. Salts and other harsh mineral purgatives irritate the delicate lining of the bowels. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills—entirely vegetable—regulate

"I don't suppose it would."

She gave him a kiss, after which he wrote a note to a steamship company asking for room on the vessel to sail that day two weeks and to his banker for a letter of credit.

They sailed in February for a trip to Naples and other Italian cities, and before their departure so great had become the confidence by the medical profession that efforts were being made to preserve the radium producing grounds in the United States for the benefit of the sufferers of the dread disease, which has always been one of the scourges of humanity.

And now George and Lucy Underhill
are touring in Europe, but the money
they were married purposely to devote to keeping up the husband's spirits is not needed. They have all the comforts and luxuries they require without encroaching on their capital.

The Fox's Useful Brush.

Though it is only a useless and
rather stupid trophy to the hunter,
the fox's brush is of value in many ways as well as an ornament to the
fox. His broad, bushy tail is the rudder which enables him to twist
and turn at any moment when running at full speed. In approaching a wall or a hedge or a ditch which has to be jumped the fox gains additional impetus by rapidly twirling his tail round, just as an aeroplane propeller revolves. Again, in climbing trees
the fox uses his tail as a balance or a sort of fifth leg, and finally in curling himself up to sleep he covers his head
warm and cozily with his brush.—

Idleness Is Death.

Most men cannot be idle and live.
That sounds strange. It is true. It is a law of nature. If a man past forty leads an idle life the probability is that he will live to be fifty-seven years old. If he leads a harmonious and sufficiently occupied life he will live to be sixty-six. This is the experience of life insurance companies,
which make a specialty of old age
annuities.

The figures tell the story. Idleness is harder on the vital organs of mankind than work. To be idle is to die.

Mrs. Shopper—Ah! A friend of

The Last Straw.

"What was the matter with the maid you got the other day? I hear you have discharged her."

"She didn't seem to have sufficient intelligence to get along here.
Her cooking was fair, but when she used my husband's tango shirt for a dust cloth we just had to part with her."

said you was the driest old stick she ever knew.

There is supreme satisfaction in knowing just what you want, and getting it. There is very great lack of satisfaction in not knowing exactly what you want and getting something you are not quite sure of. If you will read the advertising columns, you will probably find just what you want, and where to get it. The makers and sellers of things, good to eat or to wear, do not make any mystery of their business. They tell you, as plainly as print can, what they have, and how good it is, and most of them give an unqualified guarantee of satisfaction. ## CRITICISING A CRITIC.

Points For the Purist Who Found Flaws in Gray's "Elegy."

To look for and find in masterpieces little flaws, real or imagined, is an occupation that must have its mysterious joys, otherwise, as it brings no profit, the task would not command all the time and labor that are devoted to it, nor would every such discovery be so exultingly proclaimed. This condition is based, or, rather, its repetition, by the letter in which a correspondent confessed that, having heard verbal perfection ascribed to Gray's "Elegy," he was moved carefully to examine the verses on the chance of proving this praise undeserved. And he did, he thinks, having found no less than two errors in the lines:

Their name, their years, spelt by the unlettered muse

The place of fame and elegy supply. And many a holy text around she strews To teach the rustic moralist to die.

Now, just why Gray put the word "name" in the singular and not in the plural might be made the subject of ingenious inquiry, with any one of half a dozen sufficient explanations as recompense and all inconclusive, but to see force in the diversity of village patronymics—that requires more than ingenuity; it demands perversity. As for "many a holy text," that does indeed, the grammarians say, insist that a verb in immediate sequence be singular. Even the grammarians admit, however, with innumerable writers of both verse and prose, that if the verb be in a later clause the plural idea involved in "many" can properly be allowed to govern. Would our correspondent insist that when the estimable W. Scott, quoted by Gould Brown in debating this very question, wrote

In Hawick twinkled many a light,
Behind him soon they set in night—

the "they" should have been turned to "it"? The change would at least be amusing. That much can be said.

Critics of this sort never will learn that rules for linguistic usage are not applied to but are deduced from writers like Gray and Scott, that what such men do is right because they do it and that no further justification is needed.—New York Times.

Lightning rods in Iowa are as showing an efficiency of 99.9 per cent., and inspected rods in Missouri show an efficiency 99.9 per cent. records in Iowa show that for the years 1905-1912 the average number of insurance companies carrying rod building was 55. The number of companies reporting one year was 68 and the total lightning claims paid these companies for the whole years on rod buildings were $4,464.30—an average of $10 company per year. On buildings they paid lightning amounting to the large sum of 065.32, which is an average of per company per year, and the number of unrod buildings was same as the rod buildings.

In Michigan where a company insures only rod buildings have been inspected a risk of $1075 was carried during four years damage claims arising from lightning during that time totalled $32.

These and other proofs supplied by Prof. Day are practical demonstrations of the scientific fact that lightning rods properly installed protection. In giving direct the proper rodding of building reader is reminded that lightning electricity. Prof. Day asserts rods should be in metallic contact of attachment is directly opposite that adopted when lightning were first used.

FLINT STONES WERE SCARCE.

Our War Office Had to Advise For Them In 1776.

"The war office calls upon all persons who know where flint stones can be secured to notify congress."

Was there aught of prophecy in this brief appeal printed four days after the signing of the Declaration of Independence?

A copy of the Pennsylvania Packet contains the advertisement. The newspaper bears date of July 8, 1776, and in the same column explains that the flints are to be used for rifles. And without the old flintlock there would have been no American independence—at least not for many more years after the Boston tea party. If indeed, the colonials unarmed could have mustered up courage to dump the lead lined boxes into the bay.

Further perusal of the old newspaper shows Jamaica rum and sugar were offered for sale by the hogshead; a reward of $6 was offered for the return of a horse that had strayed away from the range, and a woman who had lost two cows rushed into print with the statement that the individual who would lead the bovines home again would be remunerated to the extent of $4.

Sheriff's sales occupy a column and a half and the Packet's publisher takes space to announce "advertisements are thankfully received," adding that "undesired subscribers pay their back dues at 10 cents a copy it will be impossible to continue publication after another month."

A very clever trick often seen in India is the following, which is known as the "dry sand trick."

The fakir brings forward a pail, which he proceeds to fill with water. He then shows some ordinary sand, quite dry. To prove its dryness he takes up a handful and, blowing sharply upon it, scatters it in all directions. He then takes up another handful and drops it into the water. We can all see it lying in the bottom of the pail under the water. Next, showing his hands empty, he places one in the pail and brings out a handful of the sand. Blowing upon it, it still scatters in all directions, showing it to be as dry as ever. This is repeated several times until all the sand is again extracted.

This clever trick is performed in the following manner: Fine, clean sand is

PRESENT YOUR BODY A LIVING SACRIFICE

A Sacrifice Brought to Lord's Altar Must be Without Blemish.

Israel's Tabernacle In the Wilderness

—A Picture of the Divine Plan For Man's Salvation—The Anti-typical Gate and Brazen Altar—
The Antitypical Laver—The Anti-typical Holy and Most Holy.

(PASTOR RUSSELL)

May 10. — Pastor Russell's discourse to-day dealt with the subject of consecration. Israel's wilderness experience, so beautifully pictured in the now famous Photo-Drama of Creation, on exhibition in many of our large cities, furnished the basis for his theme. His text was, "I beseech you, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God—your reasonable service."—Romans 12:1.

The Pastor declared that the Apostle is not addressing mankind in general, but only those who are trusting in the blood of Christ as their Ransom-price—those who have been justified by faith. In the typical sacrifices offered according to God's instructions through Moses, every animal brought to the altar must be without blemish—the Lord thus indicating that no imperfect person would be acceptable to Him. The speaker then showed that God had arranged that the natural blemishes of the Church of the Gospel Age might be covered with the robe of Christ's righteousness—figurative of the forgiveness of sin.

The Tabernacle a Picture.

The Pastor then described briefly Israel's Tabernacle in the wilderness, and said that it was a picture of the Divine Plan of Salvation. God's presence in the Tabernacle was represented by the Shekinah light in the Most Holy. In the antitype, whoever desires to draw near to God may be said figuratively to be approaching the Tabernacle—typical of spiritual conditions. In the type, the sacrificial altar was directly inside of the gate. In the antitype, no one can approach God without first seeing and recognizing the fact that "Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures."

Those who accept the Sacrifice provided for sin are then privileged to go on to the antitypical Laver. There they make the effort to cleanse thoughts, words and actions, in order to be more pleasing to God. Going still further in their desire to please Him, they come to the door of the antitypical Tabernacle.

Two Classes of the Consecrated.

The Pastor then showed that Israel had merely a typical justification and a typical relationship with God; for until Christ offered the real sacrifice for sin there could be no actual justification. But justification is a progressive matter. One who sees Christ's sacrifice is not fully justified. Every step of faith, obedience and

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, May 11.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 142 cars, comprising 2800 cattle, 1006 hogs, 90 sheep and 331 calves.

Butchers.

Choice steers, $8 to $8.30; good to choice at $7.75 to $8; medium at $7.50 to $7.75; common at $7 to $7.40; choice cows at $7 to $7.50; good at $6.50 to $6.75; common cows at $5 to $5.75; canners and cutters at $3.50 to $4.50; choice bulls at $7 to $7.50; good at $6.50 to $6.75; common bulls at $6 to $6.25.

Stockers and Feeders.

The market for stockers and feeders held about steady. Choice steers, 800 to 900 lbs., sold at $7.35 to $7.50; steers, 600 to 700 lbs., sold at $7 to $7.25; stock heifers, $6.75 to $7.10.

Milkers and Springers.

Receipts of milkers and springers were moderate, and they sold at high prices, as usual. Prices ranged at from $90 to $100 each.

Veal Calves.

Receipts of veal calves were moderate and prices firm. Choice calves sold at $9 to $9.50; good, $8.50 to $9.25; common and medium, $6.25 to $7.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

There were only 30 sheep and lambs reported on sale. Prices were firm. Sheep, ewes, sold at $6.50 to $7.75; rams, $6 to $8.50; clipped yearling American wethers, $8.50; weaning natives, unclipped, $8.75 to $9.50; spring lambs, $7 to $10 each.

Hogs.

Hog prices were lower. Selects fed and watered, $8.35; and $8 f.o.b. cars, and $8.60 weighed off cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, May 11.—At the Montreal cattle market the supply was larger and an easier feeling developed for good to choice steers, and prices declined 10c to 25c per 100 pounds. empty he places one in the pail and brings out a handful of the sand. Blowing upon it, it still scatters in all directions, showing it to be as dry as ever. This is repeated several times until all the sand is again extracted.

This clever trick is performed in the following manner: Fine, clean sand is selected, washed carefully in hot water several times and dried in the sun. Some of this sand is then placed in a frying pan with a lump of fresh lard and is cooked until all the lard is burned away. The result is that every particle of sand is covered with a thin coating of grease, so that when this sand is dropped into the water it remains dry.—Scientific American.

Four Footed Poultry.

A certain old man in the Wynchope settlement named Bickley was exceedingly fond of "big words." He was riding his horse over the country one bright spring day, apparently intent on some important business.

Whenever he met anybody he gravely asked: "Have you seen anything of any stray poultry today? I've lost mine and am hunting it." When they told him "No" he would proceed on his way.

After spending several hours in what seemed to be a vain search he at last rode up to the door of a farmhouse and called, "Hello!" A lady came to the door, and, doffing his hat very politely, the old man inquired if she had "noticed any stray poultry around?"

After a moment's thought the woman told him she had seen no chickens.

"Oh," he replied, "it's my hogs that I've lost, not my chickens."—Youth's Companion.

Armenian Peasant Life.

Among the Armenian peasants the old patriarchal system prevails. The entire family of a score or two of people of several generations lives beneath a single roof. Together both men and women till the fields in a primitive manner, and when the grain is ripe, they take a sheaf to the roadside that the passing stranger may give a present and thus bless the crop. Their houses are of stone roughly laid or of mud, or frequently they are half underground, and from a distance their homelike roofs resemble the mounds of a prairie dog settlement.—Christian Herald.

The Pastor then showed that Israel had merely a typical justification and a typical relationship with God; for until Christ offered the real sacrifice for sin there could be no actual justification. But justification is a progressive matter. One who sees Christ's sacrifice is not fully justified. Every step of faith, obedience and desire to please God is a step toward complete justification, however.

Israel's Atonement Day, the speaker declared, typified the work of the entire Gospel Age. In the antitype, God's consecrated people of that Age are represented by the two goats that took part in the ceremony. They are either the Lord's goat class or the scapegoat class. In the type, the high priest cast lots upon the goats, and then offered the Lord's goat in sacrifice. In the antitype, this signifies God's acceptance of the consecrated. From that moment onward the person is reckoned dead. Thenceforth the goat represents the old nature—the flesh—counted dead. The New Creature is represented in the members of the high priest's body.

The Pastor explained carefully that as in the type the sacrifice of the bullock preceded that of the Lord's goat and made it possible, so in the antitype Christ's sacrifice preceded that of the church and made it possible. During this Gospel Age God has been accepting only those who desire to follow in Jesus' footsteps. Others will have opportunity to approach Him during the next Age.

"Present Your Bodies."

Referring again to his text, the Pastor showed that the Apostle's argument relates to consecration. In the type, only the high priest could offer the Atonement Day sacrifices. In the antitype our Lord offers those who present themselves in consecration. Thenceforth the sacrifice is reckoned dead.

In this connection, the Pastor explained that the Aaronic Order of Priests, consisting of the high priest and the underpriests, represented Christ and the Church. The Scriptures declare that the Church is a Royal Priesthood, of which Jesus is High Priest. In the typical Atonement Day sacrifices the animals represented the human nature of Jesus and the Church; but Aaron and his sons represented the New Creatures. All who have presented their bodies living sacrifices, and have been accepted and begotten of the Holy Spirit, are the antitypical underpriests, and as such have access to the antitypical Holy. There they walk by the light of the antitypical Golden Candlestick, eat the antitypical Shewbread and offer incense at the antitypical Golden Altar—representing spiritual blessings.

Gas Companies.

There are 1,233 British gas companies in England and Wales, 260 in Scotland, 110 in Ireland, 161 in Australia and 72 in other British possessions.

Entirely Out of Place.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, May 11.—At the Montreal cattle market the supply was larger and an easier feeling developed for good to choice steers, and prices declined 10c to 25c per 100 pounds. Other grades were unchanged owing to the fact that they were not advanced last week in sympathy with the above. At this reduction there was a fair demand from some buyers, while others showed a disposition to hold off on advices from Toronto that the run was large. The quality of the stock coming forward is generally above the average for this season of the year and buyers have no difficulty in making their selections.

The weak feeling that developed in the market for hogs this day week was more pronounced today and prices secured a further decline of 35c per 100 pounds for Ontario stock and 10c to 35c for Manitobas. At this reduction there was a good demand from packers as they all seem to want stock and a fairly active trade was done with sales of Ontario selected stock at $9.40, Manitobas at $8.90. Sows sold at $6.90 to $7.40, and stags at $4.45 to $4.75 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

The feature of the small meats trade was the importation of two carloads of yearling lambs from the United States, which were of very good quality.

NEW YORK, May 12.—When the Cunard liner Caronia docked yesterday she reported that two days from New York fire was discovered in hatch No. 5 among an enormous consignment of Oriental rugs. The hatch is in the rear of the vessel, and thus the smoke was carried off so that none but the steerage passengers were alarmed. An officer, wearing a helmet, led a party of the crew into the hatch and for five hours the hatch was flooded. This checked the flames.

JAPANESE THEATRES.

The Plays Are Long and the "Invisible" Characters Are Unique.

Although the Japanese have copied the best institutions in the world in remodeling their own, the theatre in Japan is essentially different from other countries, and some of the best ideas might well be copied by our hours of amusement. The revolving stage, for instance, which allows the scene to be changed without a long tiresome wait is one of them.

Other features can not be so much commended. Take for example the dressers to the chief actors, who flit hurriedly to and fro dressed in black, which gives them the appearance of black spectres. They are supposed to be invisible, and in addition to throwing around the actors with a marvelous dexterity the changes of costume they act as valets. It is amusing to see one of these "shades" giving the hero a cup of tea, a fan, a handkerchief, or, if the situation is a dramatic one, holding a taper at the end of a long stick, which lights up the actor's face.

see one of these shades giving the hero a cup of tea, a fan, a handkerchief, or, if the situation is a dramatic one, holding a taper at the end of a long stick, which lights up the actor's face.

In Japan the theatre goer starts out at 9.30 or 10 o'clock in the morning. It is not necessary that he should have made a visit to the box office, for Japan has no such institution. There is a sort of tea house or restaurant in front of each theatre, where the tickets can be arranged for; also refreshment or any sort of attention which may be needed during the lengthy play. During the play attendants go about constantly with small handless cups of delicious amber tea which perfumes the air.

When the scene opens there is no curtain to raise; neither do the actors appear at "right centre," nor are they discovered seated at "L.C." A character will appear not from the wings, but from a sidewalk. These walks are often decorated with a flower border. He will repeat some lines, which some other character will answer from the walk at the other side of the stage, and so by degrees they make their way to the stage proper in the most natural manner.

The Japanese have brought the pantomime to a high state of perfection, and this is one of the most popular forms of plays which are given.

Rudeness About Doors.

Never mind if you do not happen to know the person who is coming behind you. Hold the door or gate open for him just the same. Of course the next in order may be several steps behind, or you may be obliged to save two seconds to catch your train. You may in cases like these feel compelled to slam a door or gate in the face of an innocent fellow being. But in scores of instances recently observed doors and gates have been slammed in the faces of those following by boorish men and women, apparently out of sheer clownishness. Sometimes the person thus insulted may happen to be one whom you may wish to please. It pays to be a lady or a gentleman, even when you think you are among strangers.—Kate Upson Clark in Leslie's.

At a club meeting held in a public house in a small village a discussion took place as to whether a hard or soft substance would last the longer. The debate continued for some time, until one man spoke up and said:

MAULED BY A LION.

An Unexpected Attack and a Perilous and Exciting Mixup.

Captain C. H. Stigand was once mauled by a lion, and he recounts the adventure in his "Hunting the Elephant In Africa." The captain had shot a lioness, and while watching the body from a tree he saw two lions approach. They stood over the lioness and roared alternately for half an hour. He succeeded in shooting them both, but on approaching the body of his second victim he found that it was not quite so dead as it had seemed. "I approached the edge, and immediately the inert mass assumed life and, with a roar, sprang on me with one bound. The orderly, who was a few yards behind me, immediately retired precipitately. As the lion sprang I fired into his chest, and he landed on me, his right paw over my left shoulder, and he seized my left arm in his teeth. As my left arm was advanced in the firing position, it was the first thing he met.

"The weight of his spring knocked me down, and I next found myself lying on my back, my left arm being worried and my rifle still in my left hand underneath his body. I scrambled around with my left arm still in his mouth until I was kneeling alongside of him and started pommeling him with my right fist on the back of the neck. He gave me a final shake and then quickly turned round and disappeared in the grass a little nearer to the station than I was."

The author adds that he was drenched with blood, and upon examination he found eight big holes in his arm and three claw marks on his back, a damage that partially disabled him for two years. He remarks modestly that since that adventure he has bagged seven more lions.

THE OLD TIME "YE"

It Was Simply an Abbreviation and Was Always Pronounced "The"

How does it happen that in copying and reading ancient manuscripts we call the character our ancestors meant for "the" by the ridiculous "ye?"

They said "the" just as we do, and the only apparent reason for mistaking the character is that two centuries ago the letter "h" was usually written with a tail below the line and with a razed top, which made it look like our "y." Then the word was so frequently used that it was contracted, just as the word "and" was then treated and continues to be treated to this day by many of us.

When I was a boy, more than eighty years ago, the alphabets in our school books always ended with the "short and." We called it "ampersand" and considered it a fine snapper when we rattled off the alphabet. Sometimes when sufficiently cultured we gave it the full title "and-per-se-and."

Now, it is likely that our "&" will become obsolete, just as "ye" has become. Then our descendants of the next century or two will be puzzled perhaps, but I do not think they will be so foolish as to say "ampersand" when reading our manuscripts and coming to the little quirk we meant for "and." Do let us drop saying "ye." —Dial.

BY GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON

The next morning, quite early, she was off for a canter. Some magnetic force drew her toward that obliterated line in the roadway. Almost as she came up to it and stopped Randolph Shaw rode down the hillside through the trees and drew rein directly opposite, the noses of their horses almost touching. With a smile he gave the military salute even as she gasped in self conscious dismay.

"On duty, Miss Drake; no trespassing," he said. There was a glad ring in his voice. "Please don't run away. You're on the safe side."

"I'm not going to run," she said, her cheek flushing. "How do you know where the line is? It has been destroyed by the ravages of time."

"Yes. It has seemed a year. This thing of acting sentinel so religiously is a bit wearing." His great friendly dog came across the line, however, and looked bravely up into the enemy's face, wagging his tail. "Traitor! Come back, Bonaparte!" cried his master.

"What a beautiful dog!" she cried, sincere admiration in her eyes. "I love a big dog. He is your best friend, I'll wager."

"Love me, love my dog," is my motto."

The conversation was not prolonged. Penelope began to find herself on rather friendly terms with the enemy. Confusion came over her when she remembered that she was behaving in a most unmaidenly manner. Doubtless that was why she brought the meeting to a close by galloping away.

The ways of fortune are strange, look at them from any point of view. Surprising as it may seem, a like encounter happened on the following day and—aye, on the day after and every day for a week or more. Occasions there were when Penelope was compelled to equivocate shamefully in order to escape the companionship of the duke, the count or others of their ilk. Once when the guardian of the road was late at his post she rode far into the enemy's country, actually thrilled by the joy of adventure. When he appeared far down the road she turned and fled with all the sensations of a culprit, and he thundered after her with vindictiveness that deserved better results. Across the line she drew rein and faced him defiantly, her hair blown awry, her cheeks red, her eyes sparkling.

"No trespass!" she cried, holding up her gloved hand. He stopped short, for that was one of the terms of truce.

The next day he again was missing, but she was not to be caught by his stratagem. Instead of venturing into the trap he had prepared for her, she remained on her side of the line, smiling at the thought of him in hiding far up the road. If any one had suggested to her that she was developing too fighting, is it? Look!"

He pointed to his feet. Her bewildered eyes saw that his hand was bloody and a deathly sickness came over her. He was pointing to the outstretched, inanimate form of the dog that had been his friend and comrade. She knew that the beast was dead and she knew that her brother's threat had not been an idle one. A great wave of pity and horror swept over her. Moisture sprang to her eyes on the moment.

"He—he is dead?" she exclaimed.

"Yes; and killed by some cowardly brute whose neck I'd like to wring. That dog—my Bonaparte—who knew no feud, who did no wrong! Your brother wants war, does he? Well, I'll give him all!"

"But my brother could not have done a thing like this," she cried, slipping

"Accident! Don't come near me."

from her saddle and advancing toward him quickly. "Oh, no, no! Not this! He is not that sort, I know. It must have been an accident and"—

"Accident! Don't come near me! I mean it. God, my heart is too full of vengeance. Accident? Is this blood on my arm accidental? Bah! It was a deliberate attempt to murder me!"

"You—you, too?" she gasped, reeling.

"Yes; they've winged me, too. Oh, God, if I only had been armed. There would have been a killing."

like a human being. I saw him leap up from the ground and then roll over. Of course, I—well, I trespassed. Without thinking of my own safety I flew to where the dog was lying. He looked up into my face and whined just as he died. I don't remember how I got off the horse. The next I knew I was rushing blindly into the brush toward a place where I saw smoke cursing like a fiend. Then came the second shot and the stinging in my arm. It brought me to my senses. I stopped and a moment later I saw a man running down along the bank of the stream. I—oh, well, there isn't any more to tell. I don't know who fired the shots. I couldn't see his face."

"It was Tompkins," she cried. "I know it was. He had his orders"—but she checked herself in confusion.

"His orders? Do you mean to say—Miss Drake, did your brother instruct him to kill me?" She quailed beneath his look.

"I—I can't say anything more about it, Mr. Shaw," she murmured, so pitiously that he was touched. For a seemingly interminable length of time his hard eyes looked into hers, and then they softened.

"I understand," he said simply. "You cannot talk about it. I'll not ask any questions."

"My brother is weak in his hands," she managed to say in extenuation.

"After all, it isn't a pleasant subject. If you don't mind we'll let it drop—that is, between you and me, Miss Drake. I hope the war won't break off our—"

"Don't suggest it, please. I'd rather you wouldn't. We are friends, after all. I thought it was playing at war, and I can't tell you how shocked I am."

"Poor old Bonaparte!" was all he said in reply. She stooped and laid her hand on the fast chilling coat of the dog. There were tears in her eyes as she arose and turned away, moving toward her horse. Shaw deliberately lifted the dead animal into his arms and strode off toward his own land. She followed after a moment of indecision, leading the horse. Across the line he went and up the side of the knoll to his right. At the foot of a great tree he tenderly deposited his burden. Then he turned to find her almost beside him.

"You won't mind my coming over here, will you?" she asked softly. He reached out and clasped her hand thoughtlessly with his blood covered fingers. It was not until long afterward that she discovered his blood upon the hand from which she had drawn her riding glove.

"You are always welcome," he said. "I am going to bury him here this afternoon. No; please don't come. I'll bring the men down to help me. I suppose they think I'm a coward and a boulder over at your place. Do you remember the challenge you gave me yesterday? You dared me to come over the line as far into Bazelhurst land as you had come into mine. Well, I dared last night."

"You dared? You came?"

"Yes, and I went farther than you have gone, because I thought it was play, comedy, fun; I even sat upon your gallery just outside the billiard room—and smoked two cigarettes. You'll find the stubs on the porch railing if her ladyship's servants are not too exemplary." She was looking at him in wide eyed unbelief. "I was there when you came out on the lawn

"He's got something on his mind," whispered Odwell in comment.

"Yes; he always laughs when he is anything on his mind," replied De Peyton. "That's the way it off."

The duke was holding forth the superiority of the Chinese or Japanese as servants, and Bazelhurst was loudly defending the Japanese navy.

"Hang it all, Barminster, they could eat 'em up!" he protested. "Couldn't they?" to the crowd.

"I'm talking about servants," observed the duke.

"And shoot? Why, they're the best gunners in the world. By the way, read somewhere the other day they had hit what they shot at."

for that was one of the terms of the treaty.

The next day he again was missing, but she was not to be caught by his stratagem. Instead of venturing into the trap he had prepared for her, she remained on her side of the line, smiling at the thought of him in hiding far up the road. If any one had suggested to her that she was developing too great an interest in this stalwart gentleman she would have laughed him to scorn. It had not entered her mind to question herself as to the pleasure she found in being near him. She was founding her actions on the basis that he was a real man and that the little comedy of adventure was quite worth while.

At length an impatient line appeared on her fair brow, a resentful gleam in her eyes. His remissness was an impertinence! It was the last time she would come—but a sudden thought struck her like a blow. She turned white and red by turns. Had he tired of the sport? Had the novelty worn off? Was he laughing at her for a silly coquette? The riding crop came down sharply upon her horse's flank, and a very deeply agitated young woman galloped off toward Bazelhurst Villa, hurrying as though afraid he might catch sight of her in flight.

A quarter of a mile brought a change in her emotions. British stubbornness arose to combat an utter rout. After all, why should she run away from him? With whimsical bravado she turned off suddenly into the trail that led to the river, her color deepening with the consciousness that, after all, she was vaguely hoping she might see him somewhere before the morning passed. Through the leafy pathway she rode at a snail's pace, brushing the low hanging leaves and twigs from about her head with something akin to petulance.

As she neared the river the neighing of a horse hard by caused her to sit erect with burning ears. Then she relapsed into a smile, remembering that it might have come from the game warden's horse. A moment later her searching eyes caught sight of Shaw's horse tied to a sapling and on Bazelhurst ground, many hundred feet from his own domain. She drew rein sharply and looked about in considerable trepidation. Off to the right lay the log that divided the lands, but nowhere along the bank of the river could she see the trespasser. Carefully she resumed her way, ever on the lookout, puzzled not a little by the unusual state of affairs.

Near the river trail she came upon the man, but he paid no heed to her approach. He sat with his face in his hands, and—she could not believe her eyes and ears—he was sobbing bitterly. For an instant her lips curled in the smile of scornful triumph, and then something like disgust came over her. There was mockery in her voice as she called out to him:

"Have you stubbed your toe, little boy?"

He looked up, dazed. Then he arose, turning his back while he dashed his hand across his eyes. When he glanced back at her he saw that she was smiling. But she also saw something in his face that drove the smile away. Absolute rage gleamed in his eyes.

"So it is real war?" he said hoarsely, his face quivering. "Your pitiful cowards want it to be real, do they? Well, that's what it shall be, hang them! They shall have all they want of it. Look! This is their way of

"Accident! Don't come near me! I mean it. God, my heart is too full of vengeance. Accident? Is this blood on my arm accidental? Bah! It was a deliberate attempt to murder me!"

"You—you, too?" she gasped, reeling.

"Yes; they've winged me, too. Oh, God, if I only had been armed. There would have been a killing."

"Let me see, let me help you!" she cried, coming up to his side, white faced and terrified. "I won't stay away! You are hurt. Please, please. I am not your enemy."

For a long minute he held back, savagely resentful, glowering upon her; then his face softened and his hand went out to clasp hers.

"I knew you had nothing to do with it. Forgive me—forgive my rudeness. Don't be alarmed about me. Two or three scattered shot struck me in the arm. The fellow's aim was bad when it came to me. But he—he got the dog! Poor old Bonaparte! It's as if he were a—brother, Miss Drake. I loved him and he loved me."

"You must let me see your arm. I will not take no for an answer. It must need attention!"

"Believe me, it is nothing. I have tied my handkerchief about it—two little shot, that's all. The first charge rattled the dog. But I forgot. I am still on your sister's land. At any minute I may be shot from behind some tree. I—I couldn't help crying, Miss Drake. It was cruel—fiendish! Now, if you'll permit me I'll take my dead off of your land."

"Stop! I must know about it. Tell me; how did it happen?"

"I can't talk about it to you."

"Why not? Do you think I condone this outrage? Do you think I can support such means of warfare? You do not know me, Mr. Shaw; you do not know an Englishwoman's love of fairness."

"By Jove, do you mean it?" His eyes lighted up. "But, after all, you belong to the other camp," he added dejectedly. "I—I wish to heaven, Miss Drake, you were not one of them!"

"My brother—Cecil would not have permitted this," she tried to apologize, remembering with a cold heart that Lord Bazelhurst had given the very instructions of which this was the result.

"We can't discuss it, Miss Drake. Some one from your side of the line killed my dog and then fired at me. I'll admit I was trespassing, but not until the dog was shot. He was on Lady Bazelhurst's land when he was shot. It was not until after that that I trespassed, if you are pleased to call it such. But I was unarmed, hang the luck!" The way he said it conveyed much to her understanding.

"Tell me, please."

"I've had murder in my heart for half an hour, Miss Drake. Somehow you soothe me." He sat down on the log again and leaned his head upon his hand. With his eyes upon the dead dog he went on, controlling his anger with an effort: "I rode down the river road this morning for a change, intending to go up later on to our trysting place through the wood." She heard him call it a trysting place without a thought of resentment or shame. "When I came to the log there I stopped, but Bonaparte, lawless old chap, kept on. I paid no attention to him, for I was thinking of—of something else. He had raced around in the forbidden underbrush for some time before I heard the report of a gun near at hand. The dog actually screamed

yes, and I went further than you have gone, because I thought it was play, comedy, fun. I even sat upon your gallery just outside the billiard room—and smoked two cigarettes. You'll find the stubs on the porch railing if her ladyship's servants are not too exemplary." She was looking at him in wide eyed unbelief. "I was there when you came out on the lawn with the Frenchman."

"Did you hear what he was—what we were saying?" she asked nervously and going pale.

"No. I was not eavesdropping. Besides, you returned to the house very abruptly, if you remember."

"Yes, I remember," she said, a sigh of relief accompanying the warm glow that came to her cheek. "But were you not afraid of being discovered? How imprudent of you!"

"It was a bit risky, but I rather enjoyed it. The count spoke to me as I left the place. It was dark, and he mistook me for one of your party. I couldn't wait to see if you returned to renew the tete-a-tete."

"I did not return," she said. It was his turn to be relieved.

CHAPTER IV.

In Which the Truth Trespasses.

LORD and Lady Bazelhurst, with the more energetic members of their party, spent the day in a so called hunting excursion to the hills south of the villa. Toward nightfall they returned successfully empty handed and rapacious for bridge. Penelope, full of smoldering anger, had spent the afternoon in her room, disdaining every call of sociability. She had awakened to the truth of the situation in so far as she was concerned. She was at least seeing things from Shaw's point of view. Her resentment was not against the policy of her brother, but the overbearing, petulant tyranny of her American sister-in-law. From the beginning she had disliked Evelyn; now she despised her. With the loyal simplicity of a sister she absolved Cecil of all real blame in the outrage of the morning, attributing everything to the cruelty and envy of the despot who held the purse strings from which dangled the piffling fortunes of Bazelhurst. The Bazelhursts, one and all—ancestors thrown in—swung back and forth on the pendulum of her capriciousness. Penelope, poor as a church mouse, was almost wholly dependent upon her brother, who in turn owed his present affluence to the more or less luckless movement of the matrimonial market. The girl had a small, inadequate income—so small that it was almost worth jesting about.

Here was Penelope, twenty-two, beautiful, proud, fair minded and healthy, surveying herself for the first time from a new and an entirely different point of view. She was not pleased with the picture. She began to loathe herself more than she pitied her brother. Something like a smile came into her clouded face as she speculated on Randolph Shaw's method of handling Evelyn Banks had she fallen to him as a wife. The quiet power in that man's face signified the presence of a manhood that—ah, and just here it occurred to her that Lady Bazelhurst felt the force of that power even though she never had seen the man. She hated him because he was strong enough to oppose her, to ignore her, to laugh at her impotence.

"Do you mean in connection with Mr.—with Jack the Giant Killer?" asked her ladyship, her eyes brightening.

"Some one of your servants shot him this morning," said Penelope, with great distinctness. There was breath- less silence in the room.

"Shot him?" gasped Lord Bazelhurst, his thin red face going very white.

"Not—not fatally?" exclaimed Eve- lyn, agast in spite of herself.

"No. The instructions were carried out. His wound in the arm is trifling. But the coward was not so generous when it came to the life of his inno- cent, harmless dog. He killed the poor thing. Evelyn, it's—it's like murder!"

"Oh," cried her ladyship, relieved. "He killed the dog. I daresay Mr. Shaw has come to realize at last that we are earnest in this. Of course I am glad that the man is not badly hurt. Still, a few shot in the arm will hardly keep him in bounds. His legs were in- tended," she laughed lightly. "What miserable aim Tompkins must take."

"He's a bit off in his physiology, my dear," said Cecil, with a nervous at- tempt at humor. He did not like the expression in his sister's face. Some- how, he was ashamed.

"Oh, it's bad enough," said Pene- lope. "It was his left arm—the upper arm, too. I think the aim was rather good."

"Pray, how do you know all of this, Penelope?" asked her ladyship, lifting her eyebrows. "I've heard that you see Mr. Shaw occasionally, but you can't be his physician, I'm sure."

Penelope flushed to the roots of her hair, but suppressed the retort which would have been in keeping with the provocation.

"Oh, dear, no!" she replied. "I'm too soft hearted to be a physician. I saw Mr. Shaw just after the—ah—the accident."

"You shaw Saw—I mean you saw Shaw?" gasped Bazelhurst.

"She sees him frequently, Cecil. It was not at all unusual that she should have seen him today. I daresay he waited to show you his wound before going to a surgeon."

Penelope could not resist the tempta- tion to invent a story befitting the mo- ment. Assuming a look of concern, she turned to her brother and said: "He is coming to see you about it to- morrow, and he is coming armed to the teeth, attended by a large party of friends. Mr. Shaw says he will have satisfaction for the death of that dog if he has to shoot everybody on the place."

"Good Lord!" cried the duke. There was instant excitement. "I believe the wretch will do it too."

"Oh, I say, Bazelhurst, settle with him for the dog," said De Peyton nervously. He looked at his watch and then at his wife. The entire party now was listening to the principal speakers.

"Nonsense!" exclaimed Lady Evelyn. "He won't come. It's all bluster. Don't let it frighten you, Cecil. I know the manner of man."

"I wish you could have seen him this morning," murmured Penelope, thoroughly enjoying the unexpected situation. Her conscience was not troubled by the prevarication.

"By Jove, I think it would be wise to send over and find out what he valued the brute at," said Cecil, mopping his brow.

"I shall go tonight."

LORD BAZELHURST visited his wife's room later in the night, called there by a pere-ruptory summons. Cecil had been tak- ing time by the forelock in anticipa- tion of Shaw's descent in the morning and was inclined to jocundity.

"Cecil, what do you think of Pene- lope's attitude toward Mr. Shaw?" she asked, turning away from the window which looked out over the night in the direction of Shaw's place.

"I didn't know she had an attitude," replied he, trying to focus his wavering gaze upon her.

"She meets him clandestinely and she supports him openly. Isn't that an attitude, or are you too drunk to see it?"

he paused significantly.

"It looks like it's going to be a da-rather disagreeable affair," said De

"Good heavens! What are we to do if he comes here with a lot of despera-

Odwell, genuinely alarmed. "I've read
so much of these awful mountain
feuds."

"Don't be alarmed. Lord Bazelhurst will attend to the gentleman," said Lady Evelyn blandly. His lordship's monocle clattered down and the ice
rattled sharply in his glass.

"To—to be sure," he agreed. "Don't be in the least worried. I'll attend to the upstart. What time's he coming, Pen?"

A door banged noisily near by, and every one jumped as though a gun had been fired. While the "Ohs!" were still struggling from their lips Hodder,
the butler, came into the room, doing his best to retain his composure under what seemed to be trying circumstances.

"What is it, Hodder?" demanded her ladyship.

"The cook, your ladyship. She's fall-nounced Hodder. He did not betray it,

but he must have been tremendously surprised by the sigh of relief that went up on all sides. Lord Bazelhurst went so far as to laugh.

"Oh, dear, I'm so glad!" cried Miss Folsom impulsively. "I was frightened

"Don't be silly, Rose," said Lady Ba-

"In the laundry, your ladyship.
There are two fractures."

"By Jove, two legs instead of one,
then. Worse than I thought," cried Bazelhurst, draining his glass.

"Send at once for a doctor, Hodder, and take her to her room. Isn't it annoying?" said her ladyship. "It's so difficult to keep a cook in the mountains."

"Don't see how she can get away
without legs," observed De Peyton.

"I'll come with you, Hodder. Perhaps I can do something for her," said Penelope, following the butler from the room.

"Don't take too many patients on your hands, my dear," called the mistress, with a shrill laugh.

"Yes. Remember tomorrow," added
the duke. Then suddenly, "I believe I'll lend a hand." He hurried after

Don't be satisfied with anything less than an Edison Phonograph

Throughout the history of sound reproduction Mr. Edison has blazed the trail. Every important step has been conceived first in his mind. He is the acknowledged master of acoustics throughout the world. His recent triumph is the Blue Amberol Record.

It came, after countless experiments, with all its strength of volume, sweetness of quality and lasting endurance. To bring out the remarkable tone of this new record demanded a new reproducer. He invented it—the Diamond-Point Reproducer.
With it there is none of the annoyance of changing the needle
after each record. The diamond is as much a part of the phonograph as its beautiful cabinet.

Hear a Blue Amberol—that's all we

Vegetable Ivory.

Vegetable Ivory is the product of the plant known among botanists as Phytelphas macrocarpa. It is a native of South America, found chiefly on the banks of the Magdalena, Colombia. It is mostly found in separate groves, in damp localities and upon ground that bears no other form of plant life. The seeds contain a milky juice which, as it ages, hardens until it becomes a valuable substitute for animal ivory.

DAIRY WISDOM.

With the cows on dry feed it is a good plan to add warm water to the milk before it is strained in the creamery or separator.

The selection of the bull to head the herd is of the greatest importance. He is half of the herd from the breeding standpoint, as his influence will stamp every calf and make it better or poorer than its dam.

Don't churn in a cold room if you expect satisfactory results from the butter.

Better cows mean a lessened cost of production.

Good butter can not be made unless conditions are right. If you have trouble with the cream find out what is wrong and remedy it.

SAVE THE RUNT PIG.

With a Little Care It May Develop Into a Valuable Animal.

There are some farmers who recommend killing all the runt pigs. This might be a good plan when hundreds of pigs are farrowed every year on the farm. However, if the pig crop is small and the price of pork continues on the ascending scale it will pay to give the runts extra care and develop them into good hogs.

If the runt is left with the herd he will no doubt always be a runt, but if separated and given extra care he may make as good a hog as most any of the herd. Often a runt has good qualities that will show themselves if given a chance.

It is best to put the runts together in a pen and give them the slops that are rich in milk. It will be well to put some bran and shorts in their slop and to soak the corn given them so that it will be easily digested.

I tried this plan of feeding with a runt pig a neighbor gave to my boy, says a correspondent of the Farm and Ranch. When marketed he was fat and fine. It was not long until he showed but little evidences of being a runt.

AVOID SORE SHOULDERS.

Poorly Fitting Collars and Harness a Frequent Source of Trouble.

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. Thus, at this season, before the press of spring work begins there is opportunity to fit collars and harness so as to avoid troublesome shoulder and other sores. Among the most important causes of shoulder sores, says C. L. Barnes of the Colorado Agricultural college, are improperly fitted collars, too large collars, loose harness, too wide collars at the top and not cleaning the collars and the horses' shoulders after a day's work. The first thing one will notice is that the skin over the affected part is hot, dry and painful. Then the horse will show pain when put to severe pulling. As time goes on a swelling appears just above the point of the shoul-

A Rash Adventure Where Hunter Was Hunted

CLIMAX OF A CURIOUS

The Conflict, Which Was For the Jabbering Brutes, Resulted Into a Living Avalanche Thrown Down the Hill—A Lucky Escape

When I was in South Africa a correspondent writes, I left Maritzburg one afternoon in company with a group of men who were traveling up the Tugela river. We rode at a slow canter through the long grass, for grass grows so thick here, over your head very often of us carried a gun or even a knife. All we had were sjamboks made of a single strip of hippopotamus hide and stout enough to make the blow were well directed.

We were about a mile below Maritzburg in the south of the Matroosburg road that leads through to Bulawayo. Suddenly we saw that the grass was being disturbed over a wide area, and out of curiosity we followed. We found out that there was simply alive with hundreds of baboons marching toward the hills.

There were brown baboons, white baboons and baboons almost like little baboons, big baboons, many of them, pickaninny baboons, granddads almost white with red faces, reined in our horses and no. They showed no fear and no. I got acquainted with us. They looked at us over their shoulders, they bugged their babies tight they quickened their pace.

We ought to have let them alone. One of the fellows suggested it. I was of mischief that we should have. Before you could say the three of us were in a moment and began to slash with our sjamboks in all directions. The baboons bared and showed their teeth, but attempted to attack us. I was safe so long as we were in the trees, which they tried to climb. The trees were thorny and they gave it up. Then they started the hills again.

We drove them right to the top of the hills, but there we had to stop. We could not take our horses up the rocks. The baboons swarmed all about us. I didn't stop to think. I was off my horse and after the friends called to me to stay. I was, but I was up that hill as quickly as the baboons were.

A black old man baboon was the worst. I made a rush for him. He didn't run. I cut at him with my sjambok. He only bared his teeth and snarled. I looked round. On the side were big men baboons, and they bared his teeth as I caught him. They had no intention to run from me or to let me get away from them.

I lost my nerve and couldn't think of a way out. All I could do was to back up to a rock, and wait there until my comis that the skin over the affected part is hot, dry and painful. Then the horse will show pain when put to severe pulling. As time goes on a swelling appears just above the point of the shoulder.

Splendid draft colts can be raised without oats regardless of what the average farmer believes if the careful experiments of the Kansas station may be believed. Alfalfa, corn fodder and pasturage, with a combination feed of corn, 70 per cent; bran, 20 per cent, and oilmeal, 5 per cent, have seemingly made colts grow better than oats, and at a cost of 20 per cent less. A pound of the grain mixture contains the same digestible elements as a pound of oats, and as an energy producer the two are alike, pound for pound. A day's ration of oats costs 10.5 cents against 8.5 for the mixture.

der; it later fills with serum and if it is not opened becomes infected, and an abscess is the result.

In the first place, have the collars fit the horse snugly (too loose collars are worse than tight ones), keep the harness tight, clean the collar every night and wash the shoulders of the horse with cold water.

If one can treat the sore shoulder before it fills with serum, bathe it with a liniment that will not blister, and do not work the horse. If the serum has formed, then open the cavity freely and treat with mild disinfectants until healing takes place and the skin has haired over. Oftentimes after pus has formed and the horse has not been put to work for some time the pus becomes cheesy and later dries into a hard bunch. Then when the horse works again the shoulder becomes sore. The only remedy is to have this hard, firm tissue removed and treated with disinfectants until healing is complete.

The Necessary Silo.

Few facts in agriculture have been more clearly and conclusively established than that the silo is a necessity to the stock farmer. When we consider the various conditions under which the numerous experiment stations all over the country have been conducted it is surprising to find the results so similar and all pointing to the one conclusion.

sure his teeth as I caught them. They had no intention to run from me or to let me get away from them.

I lost my nerve and couldn't think of a way out. All I was to back up to a rock, I baboons at bay with my gun and wait there until my companion could come to my rescue. Beyond two steps stones began to fall of no small size, either. A baboon is not a good man. He makes a jump as he throws baboons hit one another as they hit me.

Very slowly I backed for a very slowly the baboons followed. They were waiting for something that gave me hope. If they meant to rush me, why not back the hill until my companion reached me?

So I changed my direction and the fusillade of stones, approach brink of the declivity. I reached last and began carefully to back. The stones fell thicker than e protection I had to hold my over my head. All the time there a hideous jabbering and screaming.

Presently I was virtually under some of them. The old black who had first faced me picked rock as big as himself and dropped. I dodged, stumbled over a rock and fell.

Then I knew what they were doing for. A score of them were in a moment. They tore and fiercely. If there had not been many they would have got me but they got in each other's way damaged themselves as much as I did me.

I tried to keep their nails away from my eyes and face and throat, together we rolled over and over down the slope of the hill, scratched and bleeding in places and my clothes were shredded, but somehow I was not very badly. Perhaps the pace was great for any accurate work!

So we bumped and rolled down first I on top, then the baboons, then at last a rolling ball of baboons with me inside. I was too scared to think of death, although it had been alone death was certain. Once I heard the sound of hoof scrambled over the rocks, shouts English tongue and sjamboks whistled as they lashed round. Back turned to filmy things and took as, saved, I fainted.—Youth's companion.

CRITICISING A CRITIC.

Points For the Purist Who Found Flaws in Gray's "Elegy."

To look for and find in masterpieces little flaws, real or imagined, is an occupation that must have its mysterious joys, otherwise, as it brings no profit, the task would not command all the time and labor that are devoted to it, nor would every such discovery be so exultingly proclaimed. This condition is based, or, rather, its repetition, by the letter in which a correspondent confessed that, having heard verbal perfection ascribed to Gray's "Elegy," he was moved carefully to examine the verses on the chance of proving this praise undeserved. And he did, he thinks, having found no less than two errors in the lines:

Their name, their years, spelt by the un-lettered muse

The place of fame and elegy supply, And many a holy text around she strews To teach the rustic moralist to die.

"Name" should be "names," this authority declares, for the reason that the stones bore not one but several names, and "many a holy text," being singular, demands "teaches" instead of "teach!"

Now, just why Gray put the word "name" in the singular and not in the plural might be made the subject of ingenious inquiry, with any one of half a dozen sufficient explanations as recompense and all inconclusive, but to see force in the diversity of village patronymics—that requires more than ingenuity; it demands perversity. As for "many a holy text," that does indeed, the grammarians say, insist that a verb in immediate sequence be singular. Even the grammarians admit, however, with innumerable writers of both verse and prose, that if the verb be in a later clause the plural idea involved in "many" can properly be allowed to govern. Would our correspondent insist that when the estimable W. Scott, quoted by Gould Brown in debating this very question, wrote

In Hawick twinkled many a light, Behind him soon they set in night—the "they" should have been turned to "it?" The change would at least be amusing. That much can be said.

Critics of this sort never will learn that rules for linguistic usage are not applied to but are deduced from writers like Gray and Scott, that what such men do is right because they do it and that no further justification is needed.—New York Times.

COURSE OF A PITCHED BALL.

Why a Straight Fast One Jumps Sideways in the Air.

That a pitched baseball curves in the direction in which the nose of the ball is moving because of the spin—upward if the twist given by the pitcher is upward, toward the right if the twist is to the right, and so on—is a matter of experience that is quite comprehensible, but how a hard pitched ball should jump sideways in a most irregular manner, although pitched straight without spinning is certainly puzzling. In the Journal of the Franklin Institute Professor W. S. Franklin of Lehigh university expounds the phenomenon as well as the philosophy of twisted balls. Multitudes of "fans" who have always supposed that the baffling qualities of a straight pitched ball were due simply to its swiftness never

CARE OF CLOCKS.

Cheap Ones May Be Successfully Cleaned at Home.

THE METHOD IS VERY SIMPLE

Experts, However, Frown Upon Any Tinkering With a Valuable Time-piece, Which Should Be Taken at Once to the Professional Mender.

There is no more important piece of furniture in the house than the clock. On its condition depends not only the peace but the welfare of the household. To its faithful hands the wage earners look for warning as to the hours when they must leave home for office or shop; on them the housewife depends for information as to when it is time to arise, when to prepare meals or keep her various engagements. When the clock goes wrong there is not only weeping and lamenting, but dire disaster unless the time-piece is speedily put to rights.

In many households, where the little metal alarm clock is the chief mentor, the procedure usually is to discard the clock when it proves unreliable. It is certainly hardly worth while to take the more inexpensive ones to the clock-maker for repairs. The charge would be almost as much as for a new clock. So the defective clock goes into the ash can or rubbish heap and a new one takes its place.

On the back of clocks one finds an apparatus that regulates the movement, fast or slow, but when no manipulation of this will make the clock go as it should an oil bath will sometimes put it into good running order again.

To administer this bath take a vessel sufficiently large to hold the clock. Place the clock on the bottom of the vessel and pour over it enough kerosene to cover the timepiece. Shake the clock about in the oil from time to time, as this will serve to dislodge particles of dust or dirt.

The clock may be left in the oil overnight or for twenty-four hours if it is very dirty. Then take it out, set it somewhere that the oil may drain off,

I OWE MY LIFE TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

They Did Me More Good Than All Other Treatments Combined

Mrs. H. S. WILLIAMS

PALMERSTON, ONT., June 20th, 1913 "I really believe that I owe my life to "Fruit-a-tives". Ever since childhood, I have been under the care of physicians and have been paying doctors' bills. I was so sick and worn out that people on the street often asked me if I thought I could get along without help. The same old stomach trouble and distressing headaches nearly drove me wild. Some time ago I got a box of "Fruit-a-tives" and the first box did me good. My husband was delighted and advised a continuation of their use. "Fruit-a-tives" completely cured me. Today, I am feeling fine, and a physician meeting me on the street, noticed my improved appearance and asked me the reason. I replied, "I am taking Fruit-a-tives". He said, "Well, if "Fruit-a-tives" are making you look so well, go ahead and take them. They are doing more for you than I can".

Mrs. H. S. WILLIAMS. "Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

THE SUCKING FISH.

It Rides A-horseback Around the Seven Seas.

You have all heard of fishes that fly, but how many know of fishes that ride? The riding fish, known as the sucking fish, most often uses a shark for his sea-horse. He chooses the shark because where the shark goes there is sure to be plenty of food and the sucking fish can gulp down all he wants without dismounting from his steed.

But why does a great, fierce creature like the shark allow a comparatively small fellow like this to use him for a horse? you wonder. For the very good reason that he can't help himself. The sucking fish has a long, powerful suction apparatus extending back from his head and when he grabs hold the shark has no choice as to whether he will carry a rider or no.

Sometimes the sucking fish mistakes a ship for a shark and grips the side like a barnacle, and then he has a most gorgeous time, for he rides around the seven seas with so much to eat that he can't gobble half of it down.

Sometimes, too, when there is no other "horse" at hand, the sucking without spinning is certainly puzzling. In the Journal of the Franklin Institute Professor W. S. Franklin of Lehigh university expounds the phenomenon as well as the philosophy of twisted balls. Multitudes of "fans" who have always supposed that the baffling qualities of a straight pitched ball were due simply to its swiftness never suspected this eccentricity. Professor Franklin states the case in this way:

Consider a very smooth ball which is moving through still water without spinning. There is certainly no more reason why the ball should jump to the right than to the left. Therefore it must continue to move straight forward. That is good logic. But such a ball is no more subject to logic than is a sharp stick. The fact is that the ball does jump sidewise and in a most irregular manner. This may be shown by dropping a smooth marble in a jar of still water. The marble goes nearly straight for several inches and then suddenly jumps sidewise. Similarly a smooth baseball jumps sidewise irregularly as it moves through the air if the ball is not spinning.

The explanation lies in the fact that a rapidly moving stream of air splits when it flows past a ball with unstable dividing lines or vortex sheets. The unstable sheet will spurt now upward, now downward. The condition is the same when the ball splits the air and is shunted in a glancing manner past the bat. The only requisite for this baffling effect is power in the pitcher's arm.

Strange Arabian Custom.

In a Tripoli cemetery the grave-stones, with bowls or saucers sunken in the cement, indicate that the one who lies buried there was a person of wealth and importance. These receptacles, however, are not for flowers, as one might imagine, but to hold water for birds. The birds are said to bring good fortune, so the drinking basins are not provided wholly for love of them.

NEW BOUDOIR CLOCK.

and when it no longer drips rub it off, and after winding and setting very likely it will go as well as ever.

A valuable clock should always be taken to a clock mender at once. Home methods of repairing are not to be thought of in such cases.

An expert on clocks gives the following advice:

A clock should never be moved from one position. If it does not go when it is first placed in a position probably it is set unevenly. An unevenness of a fraction of an inch may cause a clock to vary several minutes from the right time each day or may cause it to fail to go altogether. Start it in a good position and leave it there as long as possible.

If a clock stops and it is not run down or wound too tight or set on an uneven surface send for a clockmaker. It may need oiling, but oiling is something which only an expert should be allowed to do. It may need cleaning, and this, too, should be done by an expert.

Be careful about winding clocks. Wind them always at the same time and never wind them too tight. Find out just how many full turns of the key it takes to wind the clock to the proper point and always stop with that number of turns.

The care of the clocks must be left entirely in one person's hands. It ruins clocks if they are constantly tinkered with, and it is much easier for one person to set the clock than for two persons to keep track of it.

A clockmaker says that the hands of the clock should never be turned backward. If it is necessary to set the clock, push the hands forward, as there are some very delicate screws that the backward pushing is likely to disturb.

If the clock strikes, always wait, when setting the clock, with the hand just after each hour for the clock to strike for that hour, and wait at the half hours, too, if the clock strikes every thirty minutes.

Don't let the clock run down. Wind it regularly every twelve or twenty-four hours or thirty-six hours, or seven days or every stated time when it needs winding.

Attractive timepieces are a boon. The one illustrated here is a colonial design fashioned in mahogany. It makes a pleasing gift and is suitable for the library or boudoir. Colonial styles being so popular, it makes a welcome addition to the list of furnishings.

For Elderly Women.

The middle aged woman who would still look youthful must keep her heart merry and young. She must refrain from indulgence in imaginary ills, woes and wrongs and a fondness for too much self analysis and introspection.

Look at life in its true proportions, face troubles bravely, allow nothing to dim your courage, and you will find that beauty remains far into old age and that there is no regret for vanished youth.

ne will carry a rider or no.
Sometimes the sucking fish mistakes a ship for a shark and grips the side like a barnacle, and then he has a most gorgeous time, for he rides around the seven seas with so much to eat that he can't gobble half of it down.

Sometimes, too, when there is no other "horse" at hand, the sucking fish goes a-hunting on a turtle's back. But he does not like it very well, for the poor old turtle travels so slowly that the sucking fish fares poorly as to meals.

The sucking fish never lets go of anything he once gets a grip upon. So the natives of Zanzibar and other places have learned that they can play a great trick on the turtle with his help. When their mouths are watering for turtle tibbits they catch a sucking fish and paddle out into deep, clear water where they can see the turtles crawling over the bottom. Then they let down the sucking fish, who, once more in his own elements, sees a steed and gets astride.

Jerk! Plop! Up comes the sucking fish with the turtle attached. And by and by somebody has nice turtle soup for dinner.

Hospital Of a Nation.

In the near future Switzerland very likely will present to the powers a request that in the event of a great European war all of Switzerland be constituted into a Red Cross camp for the care of the wounded of all the nations involved. That, Switzerland is now convinced, it is the only way that not only its neutrality, but its very existence could be preserved.

Although the neutrality of Switzerland is guaranteed by the leading powers, the Swiss Government has recently become convinced that unless it has some actual way of insisting on the respecting of that neutrality, that in a war between any of the four great powers surrounding it this guarantee would amount to very little.

In addition it is also convinced that the first step in any European war would be the prohibition by all the powers involved of the exports of coal and provisions which they would need for their own armies. As Switzerland is entirely dependent upon the surrounding powers not only for coal, but for its grain and practically all its food supply, the cutting off of these imports would reduce the entire country to starvation within a few weeks.

It is in the hopes of exacting a guarantee from all of the four powers surrounding it not to interrupt these imports in case of war that Switzerland is considering the project of having the entire country declared a great international Red Cross camp, and to undertake the care of the wounded of all nations in the event of any general European war.

His Chance at Last.

The busybody was circulating a petition calling upon the powers that be to abolish something or other.

"It will be presented at the next meeting," he said, "and a copy of it will be printed in all the papers."

The struggling young author made haste to sign.

"What's it all about?" asked a friend.

"Oh, I don't know," said the struggling young author, "but I couldn't resist the temptation to see my name signed to something that will appear in print."

Pictou is noted for always putting on a good line of sports at their Victoria Day Celebration. This year they are endeavouring to out-class all previous records. Take in the Foresters' Excursion on steamer "Brookville" on that date.

We assist the doctors in helping you, by dispensing nothing but the purest drugs, using every care in dispensing and delivering prescriptions promptly. Three graduates always in attendance. No boys to do up your prescriptions. Wallace's Drug Store, Limited, the prescription druggists.

Victoria Day will see a big celebration in Pictou. Splendid horse races, thrilling motor cycle races, snappy baseball match, concert by the Napanee band. Take in the Foresters' Excursion on the steamer "Brookville" on that date, and a day full of pleasure and enjoyment will be yours.

William Alfred Rose, one of our well-known citizens, passed away on Tuesday afternoon after a lengthy illness. Mr. Rose spent a portion of the winter at Clifton Springs, N. Y., and later went to Toronto for treatment, but without relief, and a couple of weeks ago he returned home and since had been confined to his bed. For a number of years Mr. Rose was in business in Napanee, first conducting a

The Right Reverend W. L. Mills, D. D., Bishop of Ontario, will conduct Confirmation Service in St. Mary Magdalene church on Friday, May 22, at 8 o'clock p.m. There will also be dedicated several memorials which have been recently installed to the memory of the late Vicar, Rev. Rural Dean Dobb.

The death occurred at New York on Sunday last of Mrs. Mary Hayden Crowley, only daughter of Mr. James Hayden, Camden East, and wife of Mr. James Crowley, New York. Mrs. Crowley underwent an operation some weeks ago and was apparently recovering nicely when complications set in, resulting in her death. The remains were brought to Napanee on Tuesday and taken to Camden East for interment.

TRINITY CHURCH NOTES.

"Go-to-Church Sunday was a decided success. The morning audience was the largest during the present pastorate, while the attendance at the communion service was the largest in the history of the church, over 250 being present. The pastor spoke in the evening on "What constitutes a successful life," to be followed on Sunday evening next by a sermon on "How to win success." The men of the choir will furnish special music. Young men specially invited.

Dr. Beeman Dead.

On Saturday last, at his home in Newburgh, Dr. M. I. Beeman passed quietly away. Some months ago he had a paralytic stroke and has been ill ever since. Dr. Beeman was a well-known practitioner in this county for many years, and had a host of warm friends. For a number of years Dr. Beeman was a member of the Provincial Board of Health and a Major in the 47th regiment. He was also a prominent mason and took a keen interest in Municipal affairs. Deceased was sixty-three years of age and leaves his widow, four daughters and two sons. The funeral took place on Monday from his late residence. Masons from Napanee, Kingston, Newburgh and other places attended the funeral.

Incubator coal oil, the best made at The Medical Hall—Fred L. Hooper.

Haag's Shows.

Haag's Mighty Shows gave two exhibitions here to good sized audiences last Monday. The show does not claim to be one of the biggest on the road yet the performance was one of the best seen here in years. Many of the acts alone were more than worth the price of admission and would have been a credit to the largest aggregations. Mr. Ernest Haag, owner and manager, is a gentleman of the highest type, and made lasting friends of all who met him. Unlike most of the travelling aggregations Haag's Show is free from graft and gambling devices, there being a standing forfeit of a large amount for any person or persons who have been defrauded out of a penny around his tents. His show has never visited McMinnville before, yet all who attended the exhibition went away friends of the aggregation and feeling that they had never before been treated nicer, or seen a cleaner or more moral show. The announcement of a return engagement to McMinnville next spring will be hailed with delight. (Warren Co. Times, McMinnville, Tenn.) The Mighty Haag's Shows will appear in Napanee, Monday, June 1st.
